

C. Hillside Development:

Development shall minimize the highly visible placement of homes and other structures on hillsides. Whenever possible, development shall be sensitively sited in order to encourage effective open space and the conservation of the natural appearance and aesthetic beauty of the mountains. When hillside development is permitted, it shall be integrated into the site, using topography, vegetation and other reasonable techniques, in a manner that causes it to blend into the hillside. Development near the toe of the hill, including the transitional area between the hillside and flat meadow areas, is appropriate.
